Kristie Richards is a senior Computer Science student at Georgia State University with a strong commitment to growth and excellence. While relatively new to the technology field, she brings years of professional experience, a proven ability to learn quickly, and a collaborative mindset that consistently contributes to team success. She has worked with academic teams requiring both technical implementation and structured documentation, and is passionate about applying those skills to solve meaningful problems and create value. With hands-on experience in Python, Java, and collaborative tools like Git and GitHub, Kristie approaches every opportunity with enthusiasm and a genuine desire to improve. As she continues her journey in technology, she is excited to bring her growing technical knowledge and professional strengths to make a lasting impact.
